Responsibility

One of the great principles we need to emphasize to keep our society healthy and productive is the principle of personal responsibility. It's a principle that needs to be programmed and engrained into our belief system. It needs to be taught and demonstrated in the home, and at every level of society.

If people don't believe they are responsible, they will not behave responsibly. On the other hand, if they believe they are responsible, most will consistently act and behave responsibly.

Also, when we repeatedly do anything for others that they can and need to do for themselves, we can make and keep them over-dependent, immature and irresponsible. It is not the loving thing to do. It is being irresponsible.

I remember reading about some seagulls in a fishing village that, for many years, fed on the scraps the fishermen left. When the fishing industry in this place closed, the seagulls had forgotten how to gather food for themselves. They died of starvation.

The same principle applies to people. When we do things to keep them over-dependent, we destroy their growth and maturity. It's the same with God. He will bend the heavens to touch the earth to do for us what we cannot do for ourselves such as paying the penalty for all our sins by dying on the Cross at Calvary in our place. While He has promised to give us wisdom and guidance, He won't do for us what we can and need to do for ourselves.
